EDITOR'S NOTE

THANK YOU to all of you who have subscribed to this magazine! I am super excited to see how it is growing in popularity. This month it is jam packed with Member Features so you can get to meet more of our members and see the inspiring work they are producing. I love the adventurous spirit of our members to try different ideas and learn from their challenges along the way. If you are a beginner who is just starting out on your textile up-cycling journey, look out for the news about our new online course that I share with you in this magazine.

Tablecloth Jacket

by Alison Field

Chinese embroidered tablecloth, gray embroidery on off white cotton.

A large rectangle big enough to fit a dining table for 10 people.

1962

When I was a little girl our family lived in Singapore, many table linens such as this tablecloth were purchased.

2023

My mum is now 93 and has just moved into a care facility, she has mild Alzheimer's but is relatively healthy. Left behind in her house is an enormous collection of linen, some were purchases, most were made by her as a child and later in her life, many are made by my grandmothers or aunties. There are tablecloths, doilies, lace edged hankies, place mats, table runners, hand towels and so much more.

I look at this collection and see the time and love devoted to making these things and I remember the faces of those women and their smiles.

I want to honor the work and love that goes into making these linens, and to make those memories into something that I can wear.

The tablecloth is handmade but not by my relatives, so slightly less precious and therefore less scary to cut up. So a good place to start my remaking journey.

Memories attached to this tablecloth were of Sunday Lunches with roast lamb, mint sauce and Lemon Delicious for dessert.

Detail of gray thread embroidery.

Process

I decided a kimono style jacket would make good use of the designs and cotton fabric. I'm only a self taught sewer so I chose a pattern. Unfortunately the one I chose turned out to be a big pile of problems, there was so much unpicking that the 60yr old fabric was deteriorating.

Problems with how the sleeve attached the body were the main issue.

The weakness created by this sleeve joint was going to tear the 60yr old cloth.

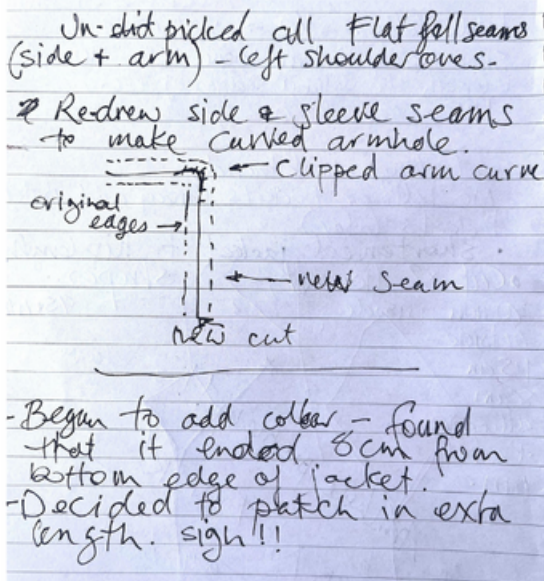

One of many attempted "gussets" that all failed.

Undid all the seams to make a rounded sleeve joint.

This first go was shortened, and a collar attached.

Managed to line up the hem with a line in the embroidery.

Finished

I went to visit my mum yesterday and wore the jacket. When she saw me she said “I recognise that tablecloth! What a great use for it”. I was so happy that she loved what I had made.

The natural edge of the tablecloth became the hem of the sleeves. Had to add an extra piece to make the collar the length of the jacket, almost lines up.

ALISON GORROD

I run sewing and art workshops for all ages in a variety of forms and also do a community class for a theatre group based on recycling.

These are just a few example pieces for an introduction to applique and free machine embroidery to show a community class I run based around recycling textiles. It's a group of mostly retired older ladies, some of whom have never sewn previously. I do mini projects to get them sewing using scrap fabrics and old clothes. These pieces were layered onto some felt to be a bit sturdier, the bird is further embellished with beads from broken jewellery, then brooch pins are sewn on the back.

AMY SANCHEZ

This was a quilt my mother made for me when I was a child about 50 years ago. The fabric squares are from dresses that she made for me and my sisters. There is very much a late 1960, early 1970's vibe to the fabric squares.

It's been in a trunk for many years doing no good in there.

So after making a few practice jackets, I decided to turn the quilt into a jacket that would get some use.

BARBARA MCNINCH

This upcycled t-shirt skirt was the result of eyeing a brown and mustard striped long-sleeve t-shirt which my sister-in-law wore a lot. Since I drooled over the stripe color combo, we joked about her keeping an eye on it so I didn't take my scissors to it. Eventually, I found a similar shirt in a thrift store so I could begin cutting on one of my own. I started gathering coordinating t-shirts from my collection and then raided my rust dyed and eco-printed stash. I have recently begun eco-printing and added the green piece with plants from my yard.

I used a panel which when cut out eight times makes a skirt. After cutting out several pieces, I trimmed the width of some and serged a differing fabric onto their side for added interest. The small precious piece of turquoise rust-dyed t-shirt is stitched over a seam and another rust-dyed gold piece was added to a panel. I had extra difficulty with this particular waistband, redoing it a couple times which shortened the skirt. Wanting it longer, I cut two-inch tall t-shirt pieces of various lengths and serged them together to make a long strip and serged it to the bottom. My color inspiration was the sandhill cranes which nest in my Alaska community. The grey, rust, and olive I see when zooming them in with binoculars takes my breath away.

I love to make things and really value using discarded knit clothing, often times from the giveaway area at our local landfill.

Living in Austria - near Vienna - I started to RELOVE used fabric years ago and only work with gifted material. My friends know about this and very often, they gift me with resources because they know they get something new back. These Lavender sachets are made of linen (an old curtain) and some pieces of cotton for the backside. The size is 17cm x 12 cm , filled with lavender from the garden, folded like an envelope and closed with a button. They are easy and quick to make and a very useful gift.

BONNIE ROBERTSON

The Elizabeth City Historic Ghost Walk is a yearly event featuring actors portraying local people of history. This was actor Laura Vestal, portraying Theodosia Burr Alston, who was lost at sea off the coast of North Carolina in 1813. She was the daughter of Aaron Burr, a US Vice President.

The fabrics used were a set of curtains (complete with the fringe trim), and a bed sheet with a wide lace border.

This year's major costume is for a former slave Moses Grandy who was freed, and then became an abolitionist. The coat fabric was on a clearance rack, the vest was a woman's velvet jacket, the ascot a man's tie, and the shirt a donation! Our event is Oct 13 & 14 this year.

DILHARA SAWALL

Im Dhillhara ..a blessed grand ma with two grand sons.. I reside in Sri Lanka ... a beautiful country rich in natural resources..

The string bucket bag is made with discarded denim and a piece of left over lace. The combination of these are transferred to be a beautiful bag. My main aim of upcycling is to contribute to nature in my little way.

Cute Paws is a new brand in town for upcycled denim bags. The story of Cute Paws began when I had to give away all my cats and I began to miss them as they kept me on my toes for the day. This kept me going until my family returned home from work. I was feeling lost without the cats, making me very depressed. Trying to figure out how to keep myself occupied and focused, I decided to try making bags with an upscale denim material. I got this bright idea of creating the brand name “Cute Paws” after my cats to market my products.

All my bags are made of high-quality upscale denim materials and a wide range of hand-sewn designs to suit all ages. What makes the “Cute Paws” range of bags so unique is that each bag made is one of a kind design and is environmentally friendly.

HILARY MC COOL

I work a lot with denim, recycling, up cycling and I recently started to make dresses. I wanted more interesting ways of using the pockets so I started an apron. I wanted to experiment and add more, I liked the incongruity of an apron as a wearable garment but rendering it's usefulness questionable. I don't plan pieces as such, I build them, so although I start with an idea I don't know where it will go. So although I started with the Sashiko and then mixed it with embroidery Aubrey came later because I realized I needed an animal to explore the world I had created.

So each night Aubrey explores through the fields, the secret places, the flowers and bramble bushes of the apron. I think he is a bit of a character.

I am by no means an expert, this was my first piece and I would like to do more, possibly a quilt. I have an idea.

JULIE KONG

This dress was part of an upcycle competition here in Redding, CA. We were asked to create a piece of clothing by using only upcycled materials. The theme was floral and spring.

I started with a white tablecloth. It had a stain on it that was so hard to get out!! It started out as a mustard stain but by the time I was done, it was a pinkish red and in a very inappropriate place. I ended up sewing another piece of the tablecloth over it.

This tablecloth became the skirt. I then cut a doily up and used the flowers on one corner of the bottom of the dress. I also sewed sparkly crystals in the center of the crochet flowers. I also cut out flowers from a 2nd hand dress and sewed them around the bottom of the skirt. Next I used a white embroidered table runner for the bodice. I lined it with a pale yellow scrap of fabric since it was see through.

My pattern was from the 1970's.

I actually made this dress back in high school and loved it! I also upcycled a dress for myself. Surprised and shocked that I actually won first place! What an honor.

Fabric - Cotton check fabric 1m x 5m - discarded end of bolt that languished in a fabric shop in Colchester UK and thrown out as space was needed. As a student who would use anything to explore with potential, I was excited to make use of this resource.

Techniques -

3 Screen prints

Several heat print designs

Silk hand embroidery

The concept was to take a discarded piece of fabric incorporate a design that related to organic growth structures used to inspire architecture. I looked at zoomorphic pieces and structures. Free painting natural form, taking it into screen print. Then applying heat pressed pencil drawings showing tiny natural forms that hide within larger forms. Finally choosing areas to embroider as natural structures change and grow within architecture themselves.

Thank you for enjoying the piece.

This tunic a Japanese apron was created out of previously felted tunic. Previously felted tunic was made out of merino wool and silk garments found in charity shops. I used nuno felted technique. I also added silk hand dyed leftovers from other projects. I originally created that tunic 5 years. There was nothing wrong with the original garment, however it was not wearable. It was beautiful, but not practical. I decided to repurpose it. I made a pattern of a Japanese apron, then cut the tunic into squares and stitched them all together. This one is also reversible. I have more fabric left to make another garment.

MARY JO HULTMAN

I am a recovering furniture painter and a retired Occupational Therapist. For some reason I moved into fabric because I love to create, but am not artistic or gifted in many skills. At age 77, I don't know if I can become a better sewer, so I chose to concentrate on simple patterns. Vests appealed to me the most. Material is basically thrifted, including the dog pattern fleece. Then I dug up the paw fabric for the pockets. (Rummage sale) I messed up on the neckline, so I added a scarf to make up for it. A comedy of errors? But people are drawn to the quiriness of it, I guess. I am enjoying this so much. Hoping to do more themed pieces. I made my husband a 'big guy' one, and now have more requests for rugged looking ones. Fun! So far I have not 'sold' anything. Not thinking of that, but maybe will have to charge for materials. It adds up quickly.

NKANYEZI PRINCE

My name is Nkanyezi Mbatha, a brother to Nkosikhona Mbatha, living in Johannesburg, South Africa. We are both visual artists inspired by our parents careers.

After graduating from high school we were fortunate to be part of a visual arts program in Newtown. We learned multiple art techniques including printing, sewing, design and ceramics. Through the programme we were able to diversify our skills and work with well established individuals within the art space.

We worked together on the pieces and it was a dedication to woman "imbokodo" as it is woman's month in South Africa. Imbokodo is a Zulu word loosely translated to a rock ...which personifies the character of the woman in South Africa... strong... courageous to say the least.

PENNY HOWARD

I was gifted a container of unwanted quilt binding remnants. They were all quality quilting cotton strips of various lengths and cut 2- 2 5" wide. Luckily there were plenty of bright colours in the mix to make strong and interesting contrasts when they were combined. I hand twined the strips (using 2 strips at a time) to make approximately 20 metres of rope. I then used my Bernina 570 with an applique foot attached, and a thick jeans needle, to zig zag the rope together to form a coiled pot. To do this I first stitched the coiled rope to form a flat circular base of 8", then formed the sides, by tilting the base up against the machine while I continued zig zagging the rope coils together. I stitched till I thought the sides were high enough (about 9"), then securely back stitched the rope end by machine to prevent it unravelling, then used a toning embroidery thread to bind the end tidily.

REBECCA RYAN

Hi! I'm Rebecca (Bec) I've been making bags, homewares and other accessories for around 15 years. My passion is giving vintage and preloved fabric and materials a new life.

My other passions are sustainability, creativity and community. I live in Lismore, in Northern NSW which you may be familiar with due to the catastrophic flooding we experienced in early 2022.

Prior to the flood I owned and operated a local handmade collective shop called The Curious Kookaburra and a creative workshop space called The Creatory. Unfortunately they were both destroyed.

Following the loss of my businesses I started making heart banners to show love and hope to my devastated community. This grew into a movement that was recognised nationally and led to the concept and opening of the @loveforlismore Heart Space.

I'm super proud to say it's now become a registered charity ! We also won a local Australia Day award for Service to Community by a Group.

Now thanks to the popularity of the blankie bags, I sew full time and also have time to devote to the Heart Space. Thanks so much to every single one of you who has liked, commented, supported and ordered. You're all allowing me to redefine and follow my creative dream and that means the world to me

ROBYN NICOLL

My husband Neil had many pairs of jeans, and although some were very new and hardly worn he would anyways choose his favourite pair that were many years old. It was our running joke each time he wore them where I'd ask "Oh are you wearing your new jeans today? That's fantastic". My wonderful husband of 44 years passed away tragically and unexpectedly during surgery three years ago and I eventually went through the heartbreaking task of sorting through some of his clothes for family, friends and charities.

His favourite jeans could not fall into any of those categories and I just couldn't pass them on. I decided to upcycle them into a couple of items I could use to keep him close when I ventured out without him. The market bag was sewn using the jean leg pieces and I added some of his shirt fabrics and a piece of Liberty as trims. The pocket was sewn on and embroidered with a few x stitches before adding a press stud to keep my mobile secure inside. To add texture and feature, I frayed a section of denim then gathered it along the length of the bag. I embroidered a heart and the word Love as Neil captured my heart at the tender age of 16. The moon was created using bleach and a stencil brush stroked into a circle before being embroidered with the man in the moon's face and x for stars. Four tabs were sew to the top to hold the drawstring fabric cord. The lining was made with one of his favourite shirts.

I didn't have a plan or style when I commenced my bag so it really just evolved as I continued. My inspiration was to make my bag cheerful and meaningful. Even the jeans brand tag became an element of interest and usage. I couldn't waste any of this precious much loved denim therefore I also sewed a zip pouch using the same technique for the moon. One side of the pouch was created with several lengths of the left over denim that I frayed to add detail and texture. The wrist strap is made from the side seam showing the original stitching. I truly love my bag and pouch and I feel my husband's presence whenever I take them on outings. They provide a functional use as well as providing much joy knowing his loved item of clothing is now living a new life.

Neil wasn't one to waste, so I feel sure he'd smile at how I've transformed his favourite old pair of jeans into something useful.

SANDRA VAN LEEUWARDEN

My friend's mother passed away with dementia just over a year ago & I asked her if there was something I could make from some of her clothing that she could remember her by. She chose a few pairs of pants & 3 x tops for me to work with. She decided on a throw for her guest bed. It was quite a process... disassembling the clothing & cutting into various sized squares & rectangles to then arrange into a patchwork design. I used the plain pants fabric for the backing & the patterned tops for the front. Keeping with the blue theme I made the binding from a preloved cotton sheet from my stash.

I even managed to keep one of her mother's name tags (from the nursing home) on a piece on the back of the quilt. She now has a lovely permanent reminder of her mum!

And they show what can be done that's a bit out of the norm of upcycling.

I also do other textile and fiber art. Slow stitch, embroidery, knitting, crochet. I make these little mushroom hangings from upcycled yarn, scraps of sari silk, and found sticks.

FABMO

FabMo is an volunteer-run non-profit that started when an environmentally-conscious couple learned how much fabric - mostly various-sized upholstery and drapery samples - was discarded every week at the San Francisco Design Center. They arranged to go up to San Francisco from their home in the South Bay to pick up these garbage bags of unwanted samples from various studios. That grew as more and more firms learned that they could save money by donating these materials instead of having them hauled away as trash. Word spread and they began to be offered mill-ends and fabrics still on the roll, wallpaper & tile samples, cones of thread, yarn stashes and various other craft supplies. Where does all this go? It goes to sewists, quilters, paper-crafters, mixed-media artists, school teachers, needleworkers, costumers - you name it! - through a regular schedule of 3-day sale events where you can buy supplies at pennies on the dollar. FabMo also has an online store where some of the most intriguing fabrics, yarns, etc. are offered first, though you must live close enough to the warehouse in Sunnyvale, CA, to pick up your purchases (or have a friend who can do it for you.) It's a wonderful group of people, and a fun and fascinating place to volunteer.

In San Francisco, CA , USA, some of the great thrift shops (Thrift Village & Savers) have closed due to outrageous rental increases, but we do still have one of the best if not the original SCRAP shop for artists & community. It's been around sine the 1980s? & sells & gives materials of all sorts to artists, teachers & the public for upcycling/ reuse. I remember one of my first purchases years ago was dialysis tubes that were mis-specced. Never upcycled them, but they hung around my studio for years as decorative curios until I finally donated them back. They collaborate with the local garbage collection/ recycling company, the school district & many other organizations.

They have monthly giveaways to teachers, & they offer inexpensive/free workshops. Info below.

A great place to visit if anyone comes to San Francisco! If you ever make it to San Francisco, drop me a line, I'd love to show you upcycling highlights of our city.

VOLUNTEER CONNECT

We started a Group to focus on charities and non-profits that are using up-cycled textiles to support social impact in a positive way. Our hope is to support these charities by bringing them all together in one space where they are easy for our members to find.

Click through to the link below to visit the Group...

It is so meaningful to see how up-cycled textiles support social impact in such an amazing way. The generosity of our members shines through in the content in this Group.

If you have a love for charity organizations and you would like to contribute in a positive way, click through and spend some time with and enjoy the feel-good stories there.
